Last chance to apply for 2010 Political Leadership Institute

“I came away with another level of resolve and commitment.” 2009 PLI member

Friday, March 5 is the deadline for 2010 applications to the successful Jacksonville Regional Political Leadership Institute, which encourages members of the business community to consider future public leadership and then equips them with the knowledge and networking necessary to run for public office, understand issues and lead with excellence.

There is no cost to participate and no commitment required to run for office. This is the only PLI program this year.

FCMA and Carol and Lad Daniels are among the PLI’s sponsors.

The program features a Leadership School on May 14/15 at the Davis College of Business, Jacksonville University with leading experts, issue briefings and workshops throughout the year and a mentoring program that opens networking doors.

“The quality of the program and presenters was excellent, far exceeding my expectations,” said Blair Wygle, chairman of FCMA’s government relations committee and a 2009 PLI member. “In time, I believe that this program will be seen by many as having the largest impact on our political landscape since consolidation forty years ago.”
